WILL GRADUATE 69 AT M.H.S. TONIGHT

EXERCISES WILL BE IN HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM

MANY SEE CLASS PLAYS

College Auditorium Almost Filled Last Night—Class Gives Case to Display Trophies

Maryville High School will graduate its largest class in the High School Auditorium tonight. The Rev. R. E. Snodgrass will deliver the class address, and the diplomas will be presented by Fred Wolfers. The exercises will start at 8 o'clock.

A crowd that nearly filled the huge auditorium braved stormy skies to attend the class day exercises at the College last night. The program was well arranged to give the audience a glimpse of each member of the class. There were no stars, all actors having roles of equal importance.

After music by the High School orchestra, Miss Ruth Houchens, salutatorian, greeted the audience. Then followed a one act comedietta, "A Case of Suspension," in which a group of seminary girls plan to smuggle in boys from a nearby college in laundry baskets to attend their clandestine feed. Prof. Emilus Edgerton, played by Leonard Gray, conceals himself in one of the baskets, but the girls turn the tables on the professor and make him promise not to tell. The situation is further complicated by the entrance of Miss Ophelia Judkins, played by Lorena Fenton and threats of suspension follow, but all ends happily.

The young ladies of the seminary were Ruth Houchens, Flora Appleby and Ruth Miller, and the college boys were Cloys Appleby, Stanley Aley and Tom Faris. Mabel Raines made a Celtic maiden straight from the Ould Sod, and Walter Smith was the Seminary "man."

The next number was furnished by the High school quartet, composed of Floyd Foreman, Russell Allan, Floyd Lunsford and Carlos Yehle.

Bennett French had the chief speaking part in a pantomime, "His Old Sweethearts." Eugene DeArmond and Edward Fritz were his chums, and his old sweethearts were represented by Matie Price, Merle Ford, Ruby Eggers, Roberta Mitchell, Gladys Thompson, Mary Scott, Martha Kennedy, Elizabeth Keck, Getha Anderson, Lucile Cummins, Jennie Cary, Mildred Massie, Vina Dougherty and Miriam Gray.

A college scene written especially for the class was designed to give a large number of the class a part in the program. It featured the high school orchestra as the college musical organization. Those who appeared in the scene were Roy Bryant, George Bosch, Dean Campbell, William Curl, Lloyd DeMoss, John Allen Demotte, Harold Dowden, Edward Ferritor, Roger Hall, Reed Holt, Wilson McMurry, Russell Robey, Cleo Shinabargar, Orville Suetterlin, Merril Epperson, Floyd Foreman, Russell Allan, Donald Dowell, Sterryl Bishop, Aline Carr, Ellen Hise, Cecile Howard, Gladys Keever, Jean Powell, Helen Renshaw, Elna Scott, Annette Stiwalt, Justine Fraser, Helen Hankins, Gertrude Belt.

After a duet, "Gathering Flowers in May," by Sterryl Bishop and Getha Anderson, there was a third one-act play, "Rooms to Let." Audrey Farrar, Frank Mapel, Donald Dowell, Odette Wilderman, Naomi England, Dorothy Rowley, Howard Maxon, Florence Busby and Floyd Foreman were the actors who became involved in a complicated and mirth-provoking situation in a college rooming house.

Floyd Foreman, president of the class, presented a handsome mahogany cabinet as the gift of the class to the school. It will be used to display the trophies won on the athletic field and in literary contests, and Principal H. O. Ezell in accepting the gift pledged future classes to fill its shelves with additional trophies.

The final number was "A Little Advice From the Seniors," in song.

The class prophecy and class will were posted this year on the bulletin board at the high school, instead of being given as part of the program. The class prophets were Merrill Epperson, Orville Suetterlin, Gertrude Belt and Margaret Kerr, and the authors of the class will were Gordon Roach and Eugene Crowson.

RICKENBACKER FORCED TO LAND AT CHEYENNE, WYO.

His Plane Damaged in Landing, Flyer Leaves in Another on Second Leg of Long Flight.

Cheyenne Wyo. May 27—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker hopped off on the second leg of his transcontinental flight from California to Washington, D. C., early today in the air mail plane piloted by C. Pickup. Rickenbacker stated that he would take charge of the craft when they reached Omaha and drive through to Wahington himself. The premier "ace's" plane of the DeHaviland type was badly damaged late yesterday when he landed and the Flyer narrowly escaped severe injury.

When Captain Rickenbacker landed his plane turned over. Nearly five thousand persons who saw the landing rushed to the machine expecting to find the flyer dead or badly injured.

"BABY BRIDE" AWAITS SENTENCE FOR MURDER

13-Year-Old Wife Is Held Responsible by Jury for Killing of 6-Year-Old Step-Daughter.

Farmington, Mo., May 27.—Mrs. Letta Parsons, the 13-year-old "Baby girl bride," is today awaiting sentence as result of finding of the jury late last night that she was responsible for the killing of her 6-year-old step-daughter with a shot gun.

The jury was impanelled by Judge Peter Huck to determine only whether the child-wife, who is only 13 years old, was responsible, delinquent or temporarily insane at the time of the fatal shooting. The verdict held that she was not delinquent, and did not touch upon the question of insanity.

This was said to be the first time a married person was ever tried in juvenile court in Missouri.

The girl, a homeless waif most of her life, had testified the shooting of Lily Parsons was accidental when she was trying to unbreech a shotgun preparatory to going to meet her husband.

The girl was turned over to a probation officer tonight by the judge. Her sentence will be announced in a few days, it was intimated after the trial. Maximum punishment, which can be ordered by the juvenile court, is a term in reform school.

Dr. J. L. Eaton, superintendent of the state insane asylum, declared the girl, although 13 years old, had a mind of an 8 year-old child.

Parsons was not placed on the stand.

Letta, when talking to friends, declared she would not live with Parsons hereafter. Parsons is about 40 years old. He had been married previously and has four children, the oldest of whom is as old as his second wife. They had been married only six days when the shooting occurred.

Mrs. James Patterson and son, Robert, and daughter, Mrs. Frank Bickett, and Mrs. Russell Logan motored to St. Joseph yesterday on a business trip.

CARL WRAY SAYS "GO AHEAD, SIGN"

OBJECT TO MEETINGS TO HALT COUNTY UNIT REFERENDUM

'EDUCATION MISSES MARK'

Charges Law Is Work of a Lobby To Keep Up Educational Salaries.

"Go right ahead and sign those County Unit referendum petitions," advises Carl Wray, Guilford farmer-banker-writer, in a letter today to the Democrat-Forum. "Why not hold the garment up to the light to see how many flaws are in it?"

Mr. Wray objects to the holding of meetings over the county to prevent the signing of the petitions. His letter is as follows:

"Looks like somebody is scared at the prospect that the people will get to vote on the County Unit Law, else, why all this holding of meetings around over the County to try to convince the people that it would be very bad indeed to have a referendum vote and thus hold the garment up to the light to see how many bad flaws there are in it? Somebody don't want the tax payers to even have a chance to pass on said law. 'No, no,' they say, 'we got the legislature to pass that law the way we want it and we don't want anybody fooling with it. Besides what right have the tax payers to have anything to do with our law except pay the taxes it provides?'

"Now a good many other new laws are coming up by the referendum route, the people are going to pass on them and this County Unit Law, if not the worst, is far from the best of said new made laws. Are the people not to be trusted to pass judgement on the County Unit law? Is it so sacred that the people dare not look into it? Or,Is it full of flaws that will not bear careful and impartial inspection? What is the object of this obstruction- Are somebody's bunions being bruised? Is the work of some able lobbyist threatened with destruction?

"Idle and futile it is, to pity the poor taxpayer because of the pittance the referendum will cost and then calmly and serenely set the County Unit Law in operation to perpetuate high educational salaries when all other lines must accept lower compensation.

"Surely teachers should be well paid and well trained: So should every other vocation. Facts are that the people see in all this a scheme to perpetuate not only high educational salaries but also educational dynasties and that the Royal food will be wrung from the people, willing or unwilling as the case may be.

"It is very doubtful if we should be able to double educational efficiency by doubling salaries. Business men who have had some experience in the matter of salaries in their own lines say that double prices do not buy better goods nor service,

MARYVILLE MEN ALMOST SEE A FATAL ACCIDENT

Bethany Men are Critically Injured When Car Turns Turtle Near New Hampton.

H. B. Cushman and Albert Kuchs were almost witnesses of an automobile accident yesterday afternoon in which two men were probably fatally injured. The Maryville men passed the scene of the accident a few minutes after it occurred, one and one-half miles from New Hampton, about 2 o'clock.

Norman Morgan and Hugh Gray, both of Bethany, Mo., were critically injured and have not sufficiently recovered to be able to tell the cause of the accident. The car was found in a demolished condition along the side of a good road, appearances being that it had turned turtle several times.

Gray, who is a piano tuner at Bethany, received a fractured skull, the dent in his head being big enough to place two fingers in. He was taken to St. Joseph for medical treatment. Mr. Morgan was injured internally, had two broken ribs and numerous other injuries. He is unable to speak at all and it is doubtful whether either of the men will live. Mr. Morgan has charge of a music store at Albany owned by a Bethany firm.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE

XLVII.—ARIZONA

HISTORICALLY, Arizona is both the youngest and probably the oldest of our states. While it is the last of the states to be admitted to the Union and as such dates its existence only from 1910, its history before the advent of white men dates back into the dim past. Here were located those interesting people, the Cliff Dwellers, and the ruins of their cities high up in inaccessible places have caused much speculation as to these ancient people. It is supposed that these Cliff Dwellers were the ancestors of the Pueblo Indians and were decidedly more advanced in civilization than their neighbors. They were probably of the same race as the Aztecs of Mexico and understood irrigation, agriculture and the building arts.

It was rumors of the great Pueblos that instigated the first visit of the white men. Padre Nizan in 1539 explored this territory and he was followed by Coronado in search of the mythical wealth of the Indian cities. Coronado, though failing to find the reputed gold, did discover the Grand Canon of the Colorado with its wonderful scenic beauty, which has become one of the great assets of the state.

This region was considered part of Spanish territory and when Mexico declared its independence it became a Mexican province. After the Mexican war the section north of the Gila river was ceded to the United States and the southern portion was acquired through the Gadsden Purchase in 1853. In 1863 Arizona was separated from New Mexico and made a territory.

The derivation of the name Arizona is uncertain, but it possibly came from the Spanish, meaning "dry belt."

"GO AHEAD, SIGN"

in a big majority of cases.

It is sad but true, that many a good farmer has found that his good money, paid as taxes for schools have separated his sons from their native soil. Education has been and now is missing the mark of efficient service. The world needs more useful willing hands, controlled and directed by commonsense brains, but it is not getting them. If education, (by our own actual experience and theories) leads our young folks to believe that because they are educated they are therefore not to be expected to serve at unromantic toil or even in distasteful places—if that is the case, then we must accept these Intellectuals as Passengers only and not the dynamic motors which their propaganda would lead us to expect to be their production.

"Just you go right ahead and sign those County Unit Referendum Petitions. It is non partisan, as has been stated. If anybody's feelings are hurt, see that it is not your own. Your honesty of purpose and desire for justice are very likely at least equal to the motives of those who are so seriously anxious that you should keep hands off. Do you think that aybody else can judge the matter better than you, after full and free discussion, such as will be had if the referendum is invoked? Somebody wants the County Unit Law referendum squelched: Why? Give yourself plenty of time to learn why later, by signing a referendum petition."—Carl Wray.

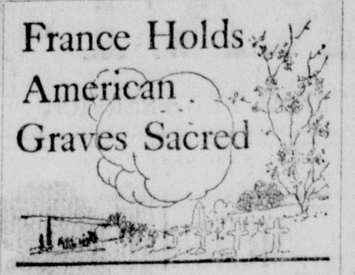
France Holds American Graves Sacred



Only the slow chisel of time can carve the truth of history. That which we debate hotly and surround with words and eagerness and doubts and disappointments fades and is forgotten. Some simple fact, seldom upon our tongues and too obvious to be discussed, is left standing against the horizon.

The beginning of some such revaluation made itself felt on Memorial day last year. In the commemoration of the day here and abroad there was a silent power that all who participated could not but feel. Tears were nearer the surface than any one suspected, memories more poignant. The very thought of our dead lying in the soil of France, their graves covered with flowers by the hands of French women and French children, the bugles of their French comrades blowing over them, stirs the deeps of reverence and loyalty.

A scene in France, in one of the largest cemeteries in which American soldiers are buried, is thus beautifully described:

Scene Most Picturesque.

Beyond the wall masses of purple lilacs spread against the low red roofs of the houses. In the distance a few lazy clouds, in sky of blue, hung about the old cathedral spires. Bird calls and scent of flowers filled the air. At our feet low mounds and white crosses. Above our heads, at half mast, the Stars and Stripes.

Monsieur Gounelle, in black cassock, spoke in French and explained to his people the meaning of Memorial day. One felt, instinctively, their sympathy and love.

Then we laid on every grave a spray of flowers and breathed a prayer for the absent ones. Each girl felt personally responsible for each mound in the row she decorated. How clear the names on those crosses stood out even though a year had passed!

The French officers laid a wreath at the foot of the flag pole and one of them spoke with tenderness of the heroes who had gone on. Already there hung upon the pole lovely wreaths from the Ville de Chateauroux, from the French mothers association, and other local organizations.

The chaplain from the post at Montierchaume addressed us, and then three volleys rang out upon the air, the missives winging their way over the white crosses and silencing for a moment the song of the birds. A young marine faced the flag, saluted, and placed a bugle to his lips. Upon the warm clear air of that May day there floated down the sweet and plaintive notes of "Taps." And—it was finished.

Girls Scatter Violets.

But wait. Who are these? Out of the watching throng came young French girls, to scatter violets upon our graves. And they told us, oh mothers of America, that they would take our place next year, and in all the years to come. There will be flowers upon these graves this year.

Gradually the cemetery became deserted except for a few who lingered. A group of marines stood about the grave of a comrade very dear. Its marker was of stone and bore these words: "A true soldier beloved of his comrades." At one side a lad stood weeping and told us that his brother fell beyond the German lines.

Madame Gounelle, Georges and his mother came and talked with us. Love and sympathy shone in their faces as they told us of the honor that was theirs in caring for these graves. I thought of Georges' letter and his offer of the friendship of "a little Frenchman." Deep in our hearts there will live forever a memory of this "little Frenchman."

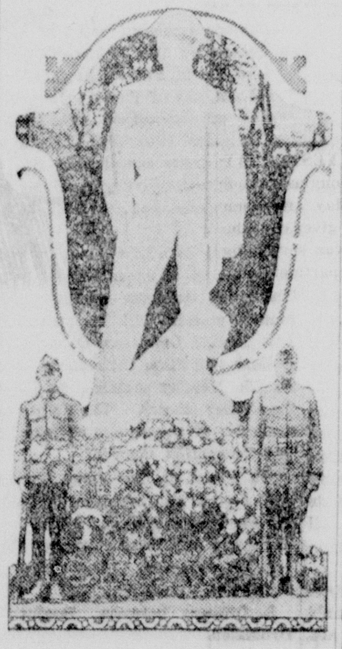
It was just the loving kindness of a kindly people and was thus, no matter where we went. Pilgrimages to the cemeteries at Suresness, Chalons, Fismes, Chatel-Guyon only served to deepen our gratitude to them.

Oh, Mothers of America you need not fear. Again the mother hearts in France will leap the wide expanse of sea and utter a prayer for you as they drop their flowers upon our graves this year.

And above those glorious crosses, wherever they may be, ever floats Old Glory, as she whispers to the breeze:

I called them and they followed;
I guard them in their sleep.

Typifies Heroic Dead



Perhaps the highest keynote of Memorial day, either in this country or abroad, was struck at Suresnes, the high hill under the guns of Mt. Valerien, overlooking the city of Paris, to which President Wilson went last Memorial day to pay his homage to the several thousand American dead buried there. The first American monument abroad authorized by the War department was set up at Suresnes, France, last year, and unveiled as a part of the Memorial day observance.

The statue, then a plaster cast of heroic size, is the copy and conception of the typical American infantryman by Joe Davidson, the American sculptor. As finally done in granite it will be given by Mrs. Willard D. Straight "for sentinel duty at Suresnes."

Our photograph was taken during the Memorial day exercises engaged in by French and Americans last year.

STROVE FOR HUMAN LIBERTY

Armies Under the Stars and Stripes Had Always the Noblest Aims Man May Know.

For two decades the recurrent observance of Memorial day has been the regretful text for comment upon the dwindling line of "The Boys in Blue." The World war has given an added significance to the exercises of the day, which in all the years to come will be dedicated also to "The Boys in Khaki," the young men of this generation who so nobly carried on the noble record established by the men of the early sixties. And in between room will be preserved for the veterans of the war with Spain in Cuba and the Philippines.

It is a proud tradition that in each of these wars the armies beneath the Stars and Stripes fought for human liberty, not for greed of territory or lust of power, but, in the immortal words of Lincoln, that government of the people should not perish. And the outcome in each has justified the faith that "conquer we must when our cause it is just." A people that takes up the sword only in such circumstances and with such spirit finds in the solemn ceremonies of Memorial day a symbolism of patriotism, an avowal of faith that can never be quenched.

The Coal Miner can't dig coal, because the jobbers of coal won't buy it. The jobbers won't buy it, because the retailers won't buy it. The retailers can't load up, because the public won't buy from them. The public can not buy because it has no money. Money is not available because unemployment has hurt wages, salaries and dividends. MONUMENT TO THE HEROIC DEAD

Beautiful Arlington amphitheater was used for the first time since its dedication, in Washington's 1920 Memorial exercises. General John J. Pershing is shown making the principal address to an audience which overflowed the massive uncovered bowl. Veterans of the Civil war were given prominent places among the listeners.

Superb National Memorial

Just across the historic Potomac overlooking the capital of the nation from a commanding bluff is the noblest of American cemeteries, and from the midst of its verdant green is reflected in the morning sunlight a wonderful edifice of snow-white marble. It is the new Memorial amphitheater, the most splendid monument to the heroic dead ever erected by any nation. In beautiful Arlington lie buried more than 26,000 men, Union soldiers and sailors of the Civil war, from private and seaman to general and admiral, Confederate soldiers, soldiers of the Spanish war and soldiers and sailors of the regular army, navy and marines who have died in times of peace. It is the highest of honors to be eligible to burial in Arlington and while major generals and second lieutenants lie side by side near the men they commanded in battle, not one civilian, no matter what his influence, may find burial within its confines. Nor could one wish to lie down to final rest in more beautiful surroundings.

Over every foot of the slopes and vales of this magnificent reservation the national government provides for a most perfect care; the grass is kept green and cut and the bushes and shrubs cared for as in a royal park, while near the old Lee mansion the fragrant wistaria climbs over an extensive trellis where the Memorial day exercises have always been held, on all sides flowering shrubs contributing their living beauty and perfume to the impressive ceremonies on this day of the nation's remembrance. Every President of the United States since the Civil war, except one, has felt honored by an invitation to speak at Arlington on Memorial day.

Worthy of the Dead.

For many years, however, this wistaria-covered temple has been entirely inadequate for the rapidly growing throngs attending the services, and some thirteen years ago the Grand Army of the Republic appealed to congress for a building fitting the greatness of the nation's Valhalla. The white marble edifice, completed at a cost of $850,000, is the magnificent result. It is a great circular amphitheater with a seating capacity of 5,000. The marble is from the famous quarries at Danby, Vt., and is a dazzling snowy white. The location of the amphitheater is on the crest of the same high ridge occupied by the historic Lee mansion with its huge white pillars, but the former is located some distance apart, just outside of the heavily wooded portion of the cemetery which is filled with soldier graves. As years pass and the young trees surrounding the amphitheater grow the place will increase in beauty and majesty.

The first national cemetery was established at Gettysburg to make an honored resting place for those who on that great battlefield gave their lives that the nation might live, and then came the inspiration to make at Arlington a cemetery that would be national in its widest sense. To provide this final resting place for the nation's dead, the government paid to the heirs of Gen. Robert E. Lee's wife, $150,000 for property which had been assessed in 1860 at $35,000.

The Arlington National cemetery embraces 418 acres and since its establishment the government has spared no expense to make it the most beautiful and attractive city of the dead upon which the sun shines. Over $1,000,000 have been thus expended in landscape engineering to enhance the natural beauty of the spot.

World Holds Nothing Like It.

The amphitheater is a majestic addition which constitutes Arlington the most magnificent of cemeteries. There is nothing like it in the whole world. Other nations have erected monuments to successful generals, admirals and statesmen. They have provided famous places of sepulture, as Westminster abbey, Pere La Chaise, the Pantheon, and the Pyramids of Egypt. But Westminster abbey is reserved for men of the highest distinction in any walk of life — statesmanship, invention, science, letters, philanthropy, as well as war. It is the same with Pere La Chaise, while the Pyramids were tombs for kings and queens only. But not so with Arlington cemetery. Here equality of service and sacrifice dominates. Commanding general and humble private are on the same level; the simple rule of eligibility for burial is the same; yet it is iron-clad. Wealth, birth, social station and political eminence, without military service, try for admission in vain.

At Arlington have gathered during the past generation the greatest of the nation's military heroes to listen to and to participate in eulogies and tributes to their silent comrades all encamped about, and here each year in ever-increasing number are laid to their final rest many of these same heroes of the wars. Every year sees a multitude of new graves in Arlington and every Memorial day witnesses the thinned ranks of the participants in the tremendous conflict of half a century ago which has contributed the great majority of the members of this Silent City.

On Honor's Roll

By Alice Williams Brotherton.

Weave the garlands, scatter the flowers
Over these sacred mounds of ours,
Lily and rose and laurel spread
Over the graves of those long dead,
Dead on the Field of Honor.

By each headstone the old Flag waves,
But know ye not these are empty graves?
Each man rose from the dust to fight
In the latest struggle of Right and Might,
To fight on the Field of Honor.

Forth in shadowy ranks they thronged
To answer the call of a people wronged,
Washington, Lincoln, Grant and Sherman,
Ay, and many a loyal German,
Roseerans, Schurz and doughty Sigel
Who bore our Stars and Stripes and eagle;
"Stonewall" the stern, and chivalrous Lee;—
With our first troopship cross the sea!
These are the great Reserves who stand
Today at the back of our fighting band.

Women of France, 'tis yours to spread
Flowers on the graves of our newly dead;
We, while we strew these empty graves,
Weep for our dead across the waves
On the red Field of Honor!

PARNELL BOY IS ONE OF TRIO OF GENTLEMEN BUMS

Horace Felton, With Two Companions, Is On His Way to Tour Europe on $20.

Horace Felton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Felton of Parnell, is enjoying a novel vacation this summer. Together with two other students at the University of Missouri, he set out soon after the close of last semester for "elsewhere." Both Felton and his companions have friends here among former students at the University. The following article from the Columbia Evening Missourian tells of their journey thus far:

The "tramping trio" of students from the University, who left Columbia some three weeks ago bound for Europe or thereabouts," sailed last Sunday from New York, according to a card received by friends here yesterday. The three, James Boyle, Horace Felton and Forest Blankenship, arrived in Philadelphia about a week ago, waiting there for passports and jobs on board a ship to work across on the trip to England. The card telling of their embarcation was from "Jimmy" Boyle. It was merely: We leave for Europe at 1 o'clock today (Sunday). Be on the water about 10 days."

Some interesting notes of their journey thus far have been received by friends here. On the first leg of the trip to Chicago, they were removed from the train at Mexico, Mo. Waiting at that place until evening, they required another train toward the north, and proceeded to enter the Pullman and commandeer a berth. Here the conductor discovered them and put them off at Joliet, Ill. But luck was still with them, for one of the three was able to talk the passenger agents out of passes for the crowd to Chicago.

Staying over at Chicago three days the party again set forth in their private cars, but were again apprehended, this time at Fort Wayne, Ind. They had the misfortune here to be thrown into jail and taken into court for trial. But again their luck was with them, for the story told, the judge proved to be a college man himself, and let them off. "The judge was a Beta and the prosecuting attorney a Phi Gam, so they let us go free," said an optimistic epistle from one of the "gentleman bums."

Their wait for passports in Philadelphia is a good excuse for them to work and gather some further wherewith all to continue, so one of them reports. Their original pooled capital of $20 had run deplorably low. They expected to see Europe for the summer on this amount, returning to school in the fall.

CABINET MEMBERS IN NAVY

At Any Rate the Marine Corps Has Men With Same Names as Nation's Leaders.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby was at one time a member of the United States Marine Corps. Now he is one of the foremost members of President Harding's cabinet as everyone knows.

But does everyone know this:

On the muster roll of the Marine Corps today there are thirty-six men bearing the name of "Davis," fourteen bearing the name "Wallace," eleven whose surname is "Hughes," six "Hoovers," two by the name of "Weeks" one "Fall," one "Daugherty," one "Hays" and one "Mellon."

Not to mention a "Harding," whose home is in Washington, D. C.

DOUGLAS COLORED SCHOOL HAS PICNIC YESTERDAY

The children of the Douglas school enjoyed a picnic Thursday afternoon on the school grounds given by the Mother's club. Lunch was served by the Domestic Science department and a program consisting of selections from the daily lessons was given by the children. Games and folk dances were the enjoyments of the little folk. Mrs. O. E. Boone, Jr., is the teacher of the school. Forty parents and children were present.

Freeman and Hartley Ousley are two students of the school who have neither been tardy nor absent during the year.

In 1886 the United States demanded that France withdraw her military forces from Mexico, which was immediately done.

The Lady From Oklahoma Is Militant Anti-Suffragist

Washington, May 27.—"She's some girl."

The speakers were not street corner loiters commenting on a passing 1921 display of hosiery, but members of the National Press Club, of Washington, D. C. about as hardheaded and hardboiled a bunch as there is in America.

The comment was made after Miss Alice Robertson, the new Congresswoman from Oklahoma, had finished a fifteen-minute heart-to-heart talk with the boys of the press on "baby Congressman night." Once each year the newly elected Senators and Representatives are invited to visit the super-reporters of America and tell "why they are on earth." "The lady from Oklahoma" completely won the hearts of the newspaper boys by her sound common sense and the pathos and human interest in her wonderful life story.

Just a moment, please, ladies! We'll pool our knowledge of what she wore and what she looks like right off.

In dress as well as in every motion and word this sterling daughter of America gives the impression of 24-karat honesty about her. There isn't an ounce of pretense about her. Right in the middle of her speech she admitted that she was six and sixty years old.

Dress and Appearance

Medium or less in height, rather stocky built, she gives the impression of strength rather than grace. Her dress was black, almost devoid of trimming.

Her hair is gray, silver gray, almost white. She scorns the false even in hair and wears no switch. Age has taken its usual toll and the residue left by the thinning process of time is gathered up in an honest little old ladies' knot on the top of her head. That she despises some of the shams of the day was shown by a little burlesque which she staged at the beginning of her talk.

After she had mounted the platform in the Press Club for the "baby Congressmen" she sat down in a chair and to the amusement and delight of the press boys pulled a puff and mirror out of a bag and began to powder her face. When the laughter died down, she remarked: "I never did this before, but I can't let these clerks and secretaries here in Washington get ahead of me." Then she told a happy story about the man who took beer by the teaspoonful on a doctor's prescription and the audience was hers. She has a rare sense of humor, the durable kind that has survived a life full of struggle.

A Paradox.

She is a militant anti-suffragist—if such can be. "I'm a paradox," she said, "vice president of the anti-suffrage league of my state and in Congress by accident. We were so busy during the war looking after Liberty Bonds, Red Cross work and helping the soldier boys that the misguided men who didn't go to war voted suffrage in."

"Miss Alice," as she is spoken of generally about the Capitol and the House office building, has a skill in springing surprises that is worthy of a seasoned stump speaker. Here was her next one.

"They ask me if I was born in Georgia. I tell 'em no, because my grandfather went over the plains into Arkansas just as soon as he got out of the penitentiary in Georgia."

Her grandfather was a missionary to the Indians in the early half of the past century. Some sort of charge was trumped up against him that he was fostering sedition among the Indians and he was convicted by the Georgia State courts and put in prison. The case went to the Supreme Court of the United States and was there decided in his favor—but Georgia would not release him for two years.

Representative Robertson is very very proud of the missionary work of her grandfather, her father and her mother and her own effort among the Indians. "I am prouder," said she, "of being a member of the family which has more years of service to the Indians to its credit than any family in the United States than I am of the accident of being a member of Congress."

She spoke interestingly about the hasty marriage of her father and mother in Indian Territory.

Her father has been sent as a missionary to the Indians by some society. Her mother taught school near the scene of his labors. The missionary society felt that it was not good for a missionary man to live alone, and so decided to send ont a spinster of somewhat advanced years to be his wife. They even went so far as to outfit her with a trousseau.

Word that she was on the way came to the missionary and the school teacher and they moved forward the date of their marriage. "The old maid was quite wrathy when she arrived," said the speaker, "but she couldn't do anything to my father for breach of promise because he hadn't promised her anything."

A War Refugee at Five.

Her voice lapsed into a pathetic strain that held her hearers spellbound as she recounted some of the experiences of her remarkable life. Among her first recollections are those of being a refugee when a child of five, during the Civil War. She told of the long flight from the Confederates to the Federal camp, and said she would never forget how good to her childish eyes Old Glory looked when they saw it in the distance. Her youth was rich in hardships. The struggle for existence by the missionary family was a hard one—often they just kept about the Plimsoll line of sufficient sustenance. Often her childish hands bled from the necessary work of hulling corn.

She skipped hastily over many years in her narrative—those years which we hear of from the lips of others wherein her kind and neighborly acts made her the best known and best loved woman in her part of the state. Plunging into the history of how she came to run for Congress, she said.

Running for Congress.

"I was sixty-six years of age when they came to me and told me I was the only person, man or woman, who could win against the man running on the other ticket. I told them it would look funny for me, an anti-suffragist, to run for Congress, but I didn't want to be a slacker. I told them to wait and I would think it over. I talked with three persons about it that day, and none of them were women, mind you, and decided it was my duty to run."

She told how they abused her as a candidate. They asked her why she didn't go and raise a family and she replied that she had helped to raise and support more girls than one person in a hundred—and told with a sad note in her voice how she had bought trousseaus for thirteen girls. Her campaign slogan was "I'm a Christian, I'm an American, I'm a Republican."

"And then after I had won they tried to count me out," she said, "but they didn't. If all the fighting blood of all my fighting ancestors hadn't come to my rescue, however, they would have. I'm going to keep fighting, too, until every white person (I won't say anything about the others) in my state of Oklahoma who wants a chance to vote shall have his vote fairly counted."

Then she told about many women who had come to her and complained because the men had not done this thing or that thing and blamed the men in Congress and out. "I told them," she said, "that they would better see that their own back yards were in good order before attempting to criticise the actions of others on nationwide and worldwide affairs. And say, you ought to see the letters some of them write me. I tell them God made men a little less than the angels and then made woman one better, but now she has stepped down and it is fifty-fifty now."

She practices what she preaches, too, having a man for a secretary, and is quoted as saying that it is a man's job. Before coming to Washington she was proprietor of a successful restaurant in Oklahoma and her office here is right next door to the cafe in the House office building, whether by accident or intention is not generally known.

Her Hobby.

Her hobby is justice to the Indians She pleads for them at every opportunity and states it is the dearest wish of her life to be able to do something for them during her service in Congress.

Another paradox about this woman in Congress is that although she came largely against her wish she is making good in the estimation of everyone about Congress. She has the respect and admiration of members and secretaries alike, something as rare as a day in June about these parts. Everyone has a good word to say about her.

The pen pauses when it tries to describe the impression of moral strength and stability which "the lady from Oklahoma" gives. Her forehead, high and noble strikes one on first glance. She has a wonderful face; it is intelligent; it is strong; it is kind and motherly all at once. While she was speaking I had a fine opportunity to study her profile. It is a wonderful profile—strong, impressive. Again and again it made me think of Nathaniel Hawthorne's story of the Great Stone Face.

SCHOOLBOY OF SAHARA

The lad pictured here is not a bandit but a typical school boy of the Sahara desert. The odd tablet which he carries, transcribed with hieroglyphics, is his school "slate." It is carved with verses from the Koran. It is the hope of the Junior Red Cross of America to bring these children in touch with modern ideas and education by a scholarship program entitling some of the most worthy to an education in European schools and vocational colleges.
